Miss Helen W. Leedom Accepts The Position of President

DIRECTORS ARE NAMED

Committee Heads Also Introduced; Music Offered at Delightful Affair

YARDLEY, May 17—Installation of officers was the feature of the annual luncheon meeting of Yardley Civic Club Thursday at the Walker-Gordon Club House, Plainsboro, N. J., with 70 members present.

Mrs. John B. Force, a former president of the club, installed the following officers: President, Miss Helen W. Leedom; vice president, Mrs. Harry K. Ambler; vice president, Mrs. Harry Magill; secretary, Mrs. William Rorer; treasurer, Mrs. W. D. Pardoe, and directors, Mrs. Robert M. Barbour, Mrs. D. Taylor Ivins, Mrs. Gretna K. Hamer, Mrs. A. A. Danser.

During the luncheon, Mrs. Robert C. Belleville, 3rd, presented a number of prizes, and assisted with the singing, with Mrs. H. N. Curtis, at the piano. Mrs. Robert M. Barbour, presided at the luncheon.

Following the luncheon, Miss Leedom, presented the directors, and the heads of the departments, as follows: Conservation and gardens, Mrs. Laura R. Ross; education, Mrs. G. K. Hamer. Continued On Page Four

Epworth Leaguers Elect Officers; Hear Rev. McElroy

When Epworth League members from all parts of the area comprising the Bristol Group of Epworth Leagues, gathered in Emile Methodist Church, last evening, for the bi-monthly rally, they heard an address by the Rev. John G. McElroy, pastor of Trevoe Methodist Church; and also elected officers for the ensuing year.

The subject of the Rev. Mr. McElroy, who formerly was pastor of Harriman Methodist Church, was "Our Loyalties."

Sidney Smith, of Scottsville, who has been serving as president, was in charge of last evening's session; and during election he was succeeded by Miss Dorothy Lovett, of Emile. Other officers named by the Leaguers are: vice presidents—1st, Miss Betty Judd, Scottsville; 2nd, Reuben Schell, Emile; 3rd, Miss Alice Martin, Trevoe; 4th, Walter Gottsabend, Bensalem; secretary, Miss Gladys Wink, Emile; treasurer, Edward Daugherty, Yardley; chorister, the Rev. Robert Kieffer; pianist, Miss Lillian VanArtsdalen, Yardley.

Prayer was offered by the Rev. Chester Buzzard, of Newtown; and an instrumental trio was composed of Arthur Bennett, Yardley, cornet; the Rev. L. F. Walley, Yardley, violin; Miss VanArtsdalen, piano. Minutes were read by Miss Lovett, the retiring secretary.

The next rally, on July 18th, will be held at Trevoe during sessions of the Simpson Grove Camp Meeting season, when the Rev. Frank Prentzel, superintendent of the Southwest district of the Philadelphia Methodist Conference, will deliver the address. A "doggie" roast will follow that program.

Emile League members served refreshments during the social hour.

Steel Worker Given Parole By The Court

DOYLESTOWN, May 17—By President Judge Hiram H. Keller and Judge Calvin S. Boyer on the bench during a session of miscellaneous court, here, yesterday, a Bethlehem steel worker, who lives near Coopersburg, was paroled, and a case in the Court of Common Pleas was heard without a jury.

John Gaydos, Coopersburg, R. D. No. 1, who was sentenced by Judge Keller on May 6, was released on condition that he pay the sum of $100 and the balance of his fine in installments of not less than $40 a month, also the costs of prosecution.

Gaydos, who is employed in the Bethlehem steel mills, was arrested by Private Yetter of the Quakertown sub-station of the P. M. P., who charged him with driving a car after his operating privileges had been revoked or suspended. Gaydos was in trouble once before because of a drunken driving charge.

Following the granting of the parole, Judges Boyer and Keller heard testimony in the case of John C. Bell, secretary of banking of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and receiver of the Cornwallis State Bank versus Frankford Trust Company and Gertrude Thomas, trustee under the will of Otto Zachamischdissen.

The latter case grows out of an action in assumpsit and is in the Court of Common Pleas.

MEET AT ASAYS

The Women of the Anchor Yacht Club held a meeting Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Clarence Asay, Venice avenue. Business was followed by a social time and refreshments.

Additional Aid Is Asked By Workers For Red Cross

NEWTOWN, May 17—A desire has been expressed by local Red Cross officials that more sewing groups be formed to help with much-needed work.

The local production chairman, Mrs. Wallace G. Murfit, has reported that 296 garments, 384 diapers, 15 sweaters completed since her last report, at a meeting held at the home of the president, Mrs. Millard Smedley, on Monday afternoon. The treasurer reported $69.67 spent for Home Service Work since the last meeting.

Mrs. Murfit also reported donations of six knitted scarfs, three caps, one baby blanket and two shawls from the Friends Home. A kit from Exchange Club and one from Junior New Century Club.

Mrs. Jesse E. Packer with a group of friends have also been sewing, and will fill ten kits to be sent to headquarters.

Mrs. William Morlok will have charge of the Junior Red Cross in Newtown schools. The children have worked on afghans this year, as have those at the West school.

D. OF A. HOLDS A CLASS INITIATION FOR ELEVEN

State and National Officials Guests As 100 Gather For Affair Here

GIFTS ARE PRESENTED

With 100 assembled for the meeting of Bucks District No. 1, Daughters of America, in F. P. A. hall, last evening, one woman and 10 men were initiated into the order. A number of state and national officials of the D. of A. were present for the ceremony.

Mrs. Antonio Terneson, district deputy, was the presiding officer, with delegates present from Philadelphia, Troughenham, and Bristol.

The guest officials present included: state councillor, Mrs. Lilly Moses, Shickshinny; associate councillor, Mrs. Julia Hoak, Wilkes-Barre; national vice commander, Mrs. Clara Sesser, Elizabeth; associate vice councillor, Mrs. Fern Wickersham, Troughenham; past state councillor, Mrs. Charles Hall, Philadelphia; national representative, Charles Hall.

Those initiated: Mrs. Irma Giron, Gilbert Lovett, Roy Bailey, Jr., Lester Shire, Harvey Cochran, Wilbur Gerlach, Harry Hinman, Jr., Elwood Hazel, Kenneth Dyer, Clifford Foster, Charles Bunting.

Gifts of money were presented to the visiting officers. Refreshments were served.

Bucks County Architecture Discussed At Doylestown

QUAKERTOWN, May 17—Bucks county architecture was a subject discussed at the meeting of Quakertown Rotary Club this week by Fred Martin, Doylestown, a member of the Rotary Club in Doylestown.

Mr. Martin deplored the fact that so few of the native residents appreciate their heritage in the old buildings located in Bucks county. Dwellers in nearby cities, he said, realize their value and are being attracted here as permanent residents.

Mr. Martin also stressed the fact that there is no other place in the United States, or even in the world, where this distinct type of architecture is predominant.

Total of 121 Exemptions Held By Sellersville Board

SELLERSVILLE, May 17—Tax exemptions were given consideration when members of Sellersville school board met in session this week. A total of 21 names on the 1940 duplicate were remitted because of deaths, removals or dependency.

The sum of $635.25 was thus deducted from Collector Roland T. Moyer's outstanding accounts. For the same reasons six names on the 1938 duplicate of tax accounts and 22 on the 1939 account were stricken from the lists. The board received from the county commissioners a long list of names of property owners whose properties have been taken over by them for delinquency.

These properties it was indicated will be offered for sale for definite disposal by the first of next year. Most of the properties are lots held by non-residents who bought them on local promotions of real estate. Until the sale neither the school district nor the borough can count on any tax income from the properties. In one instance outstanding taxes amount to approximately $300.

BOY FOR FORCES

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Force, Otter street, are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son, Thursday evening, in St. Francis Hospital, Trenton, N. J. The baby weighed 7 pounds, 12½ ounces. Mrs. Force was formerly Miss Louise Dougherty.

Shepherds Delight Lodge will conduct service for Mrs. H. B. Waldron tomorrow, promptly at one p. m., at the Molden funeral chapel.

TO CONDUCT SERVICE

Shepherds Delight Lodge will conduct service for Mrs. H. B. Waldron tomorrow, promptly at one p. m., at the Molden funeral chapel.

Italian Planes at Iraq

Rome, May 17—Italy confirmed officially that Italian planes have arrived in Iraq.

Four Tiny Babies Die

Chicago, May 17—The four tiny girls born 2½ months prematurely to a 20-year-old mother at Mercy Hospital, Chicago, last night, died today. One of the babies, which weighed about a pound each, lived almost 12 hours.

The mother, whose condition is good, is Mrs. Frances Adams, wife of a lunch room cook. Heroic efforts were made to save the quadruplets but all aids failed.

Find Fourth Body

Dayton, O., May 17—A fourth body was found today in the wreckage of an army bi-motored plane which crashed last night during a thunderstorm in Southeastern Ohio, army officials at Persson Field said. It is feared that a fifth man may have been killed in the crash. None of the victims was identified.

This would bring to six and possibly seven the number of victims claimed by two army plane crashes in Ohio during a storm last night.

Hint Drastic Action To End Shipyard Strike

San Francisco, May 17—Drastic action to end the "wildcat" strike which has shut down shipyards in the San Francisco Bay region was hinted at today by Acting Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, who pledged "every assistance" of the navy and army in settling the critical defense tie-up.

Forrestal assured those attempting to bring about immediate reopening of eleven shipyards and ship repair plants that navy and army heads in San Francisco would co-operate in bringing to an end what he termed "this most unfortunate situation." His pledge was given after Governor Olson's first union-employer conference ended in failure.

CHANGES ARE MADE IN BARRACKS' PERSONNEL

Private Russell L. Minker Leaves Detail To Enter Private Industry

WILHERE ENTERS RODEO

The personnel of the corps of Doylestown sub-station of Pennsylvania Motor Police has been changed, one officer going to Hershey to train for the annual rodeo; and a second resigning to enter civilian life.

Private Russell L. Minker, former Coatesville athlete, who has been a member of the Pennsylvania Motor Police for the past three years, has resigned to enter the employ of the Lukens Steel Company in Coatesville, where he began his new duties Thursday.

Private Minker, who was recently transferred to Doylestown, was stationed at the South Langhorne sub-station, where he was one of the most popular officers and well-known in that community.

Private Harry J. Wilhere, of Philadelphia, who was transferred to the county seat from the Bethlehem headquarters, has left for the Pennsylvania Motor Police Training School at Hershey, where he will begin intensive training for the annual rodeo, famous throughout the East during the regime of the Pennsylvania State Police.

Private Wilhere, an excellent horseman, will take part in the rodeo which will be staged in August and September in various parts of the State as a benefit for the retirement fund of the motor policemen. The rodeo, which attracts national attention because of the unique and showy feats by the "coppers and their horses," nets more than $70,000 as a benefit.

Methodists Decide To Erect New Parsonage

At a congregational meeting of the members of the Bristol Methodist Church, last night, it was decided to raze the present brick parsonage building at Mulberry and Cedar streets, and to erect a new parsonage.

After the meeting had convened two propositions were submitted to the meeting:

To remodel the present brick residence adjacent to the church or to raze the present structure and erect a new dwelling for the church pastor.

A total of $700 was pledged to be paid within the next six weeks toward the proposed expenditure.

The building committee was authorized to procure plans and specifications for the new building.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Consigned by 29 breeders from six states, 70 head of high class Guernsey cattle were sold at remarkably high prices at the Eastern Guernsey Sale held on Tuesday afternoon on the fair grounds at Doylestown. With Harry M. Pate in charge, the sale, attended by more than 600 persons, including purchasers from Maryland, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, New Jersey, Connecticut, New York, Vermont, Illinois and New Hampshire, was held under the management of the Pate Sales Company, Kennett Square.

The cattle offered were previously owned by breeders in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, New York, Delaware and New Hampshire. Four of the breeders making consignments were from Bucks county. They were as follows: Bolton Farms, Bristol, two; Amos Bryan, Perkasie, five; Walter Craig, Perkasie, two, and E. F. Stewart, Colmar, three.

Seven of the buyers were from Bucks county. The buyers and the number of cattle they purchased were as follows: Thomas M. Shaw, Doylestown township, two; J. N. Matthews, Gardenville, six; Alvin Worthington, Newtown, 1; William C. Clark, La-haska, 1; Thirston Farms, Langhorne, 2; Frederick B. Williamson, New Hope, 2, and Mrs. C. H. Pope, Quakertown, 1.

Mr. Matthews, who recently purchased a farm in the Gardenville section, had the distinction of paying the highest price. He bought a bull, "Hardwick's Rose King," consigned by Henry W. Leeds, Locust Grove Dairies, Westville, N. J., at $1025. Joseph P. Broadhurst, Holicong, is manager of these dairies.

Two yearling heifers, also consigned by Locust Grove Dairies, were sold for $535 each. They were purchased by Clarence Wimpfheimer, Stonington, Conn.

The average price received for the cattle was $489, and this was $130 higher than the average at a similar sale held on the fair grounds last Spring.

S. C. Price, Hazleton, donated a heifer for British war relief, and this was purchased by Mr. Niedner, Petersburg, N. H., for $500.

Bids throughout the sale were received by E. M. Granger, Thompsonville, Conn., and E. Newlin Brown, Doylestown, served as ring auctioneer.

Walter H. Delsroth, vice-president of the board of trustees of Tabor Home, near Doylestown, announced that a new girls' dormitory and auditorium will be erected in memory of the late C. Henry Strecker.

Public ground-breaking exercises will take place at four p. m., today, during the annual May day celebration.

Many notable Philadelphians, including the Rev. Ross Stover, who will be one of the speakers, will attend the ceremonies.

SOBY POST AUXILIARY PLANS MANY ACTIVITIES

Aid of All Members Is Enlisted For Memorial Day Programs

POPPY SALE NOW ON

LANGHORNE, May 17—Countless activities along many lines are keeping members of American Legion Auxiliary of Jesse W. Soby Post busy during the months of May and June, with many plans for the future announced by president, Mrs. Ernest Robinson, and her officials.

Mrs. Robinson is enlisting the aid of all members in Memorial Day programs, both here and in Hulmeville, where Soby Post and Auxiliary, and other organizations will participate in paying due respect to the memory of those who served their country and have passed on. Medal awards will be made by the Auxiliary to the outstanding girl in the eighth grades of five schools in this area on that day.

The visit of the national president of the Auxiliary to Pennsylvania will be an event of May 23rd, with dinner being served at McAllister's in Philadelphia.

Poppy sale is now on, with Mrs. Frank Buckley serving as chairman for the unit. A poppy contest is being conducted among the young members.

A date will be set in the near future for presentation of an American flag to the Langhorne-Middletown high school, a gift of the post and auxiliary.

ON EDITORIAL STAFF

The Junior class of New Jersey College for Women has just elected a business and editorial staff for next year's edition of "Quair," the college year book, and Miss Jean Rosser, Bristol, was chosen circulation manager.

"Quair" is published each spring by the senior class. Miss Rosser is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith M. Rosser, McKinley street, and majors in classical civilization at N. J. C.

HONOR THREE MEMBERS

NEWPORTVILLE, May 17—The Junior Fellowship of Newportville Community Church—Presbyterian, held a monthly business meeting in the church basement on Thursday evening. Three of the members had birthdays this month, Jane Wimmersberger, Jacquelin Ingraham, Dolly Houck. Candles were placed on the cake in their honor, and gifts presented to them.

$5,000 Fire Sweeps Estate Located At Neshaminy

NESHAMINY, May 17—Fire caused $5,000 damage when it swept through a two-story store room, two horse stables, a store house and annex on the W. S. Worthington estate, on the Lackawanna Trail, Thursday.

Three fire companies, Warrington Township Fire Company, practically within a stone's throw of the scene of the fire; Horsham and Hathoro Fire Companies battled the flames saving the main store structure and three garages after a small wooden connecting unit had been destroyed. Water was pumped from the Neshaminy Creek.

Four brothers, Albert Worthington, of Doylestown; David, Raymond and Ralph, are the owners of the store. Albert and David are employed in the store.

Flames were seen coming out of the roof of the two-story store room by Mrs. Frank Rose, Easton Road.

Included in the loss was an antique living and dining room suite of solid mahogany, which belonged to an uncle of the Worthington boys, and was stored on the second floor of the store room.

The presiding officer was Louis H. Willhite, Bristol. Mr. Nelson was elected president, to fill out the unexpired term of the late William H. Payne. Mrs. Ida Carter, New Hope, was named recording secretary; and Miss Alice Price, Bristol, corresponding secretary.

Members were present from Bristol, Doylestown, New Hope, Torresdale, Buckingham, Langhorne, Morrisville, Edison, Newtown. Refreshments were served.

Bucks County Cows Make Production Records

PETERBOROUGH, N. H., May 17—Two Guernsey cows owned by Amos Bryan, of Perkasie, Pa., have just finished new official records for production which entitles them to entry in the Advanced Register of The American Guernsey Cattle Club. These animals include four and one-half year old Meadow Spring Dona 439723 producing 11736.3 pounds of milk and 572.4 pounds of butter fat in class B, and three and one-half year old Home-tad Select's Royal Queen 496462 producing 11060.3 pounds of milk and 537.1 pounds of butter fat in class DD.

A new record, exceeding the average of the Guernsey breed for her age and class has just been completed by a five and one-half year old cow Robin Run's Marilyn 402405 of Wycombe, Pa., tested and owned by Clarence H. Smith. Her official record supervised by The Pennsylvania State College and announced by The American Guernsey Cattle Club is 10946.2 pounds of milk and 603.7 pounds of butter fat in class AA.

CHURCHES TO GET MONEY UNDER WILL OF THERESA WELER

Catholic Church In Quakertown Is Bequeathed the Sum of $1,000

HOSPITAL GETS $250

Other Wills Are Probated and Letters Are Granted To Persons Named

DOYLESTOWN, May 17—Bequests of $1,000 for a Catholic church in Quakertown, $100 for the Quakertown hospital, $250 for a Haycock township Catholic church and $200 for a Catholic home in Tacony, were contained in the will of Theresa Weller, of Quakertown, who died April 5th, leaving a personal estate of $20,000 and real estate valued at $3500.

St. Isadore's Catholic Church, Quakertown, was bequeathed $1,000 and the sum of $50, in addition, was given for the saying of masses for the repose of the soul of the testatrix.

St. John's Catholic Church, Haycock township, was given $250, and the St. Francis Home, Tacony, was bequeathed $200.

Two trust funds, each for $200 in the Quakertown Trust Company, were created, the first for the benefit of St. Isadore's Catholic Cemetery in Quakertown, and the second for a burial lot for a son, William Weller, in a Lutheran church cemetery at Schlichtersville.

A property at 434 East Broad street, Quakertown, was bequeathed to Stanley Weller, who was also bequeathed the personal possessions and household articles of the testatrix.

Among the beneficiaries was "Benjie" Bessler, well-known former Doylestown high school athlete, now living here, who was given $100. Other heirs included: Lena Weller, a daughter-in-law, $200; Henry Weller, a step-son, Fox Chase, $500; Hattie Ott, a cousin, $500; Carrie Fosbender, Quakertown, $100; Peter Fosbender, $100; Theresa Brown, West Philadelphia, $200.

The Quakertown Community Hospital was given $200.

Stanley Walker, a grandson, was bequeathed the sum of $10,000 in trust, with provisions, and was also given the residue. Samuel F. Cressman, Quakertown banker, and Sophia A. Weller, Woodbridge, N. J., were named executors.

Croydon Rescue Squad Is Aiding at Scene of Fire

CROYDON, May 17—Croydon unit of Bucks County Rescue Squad, sent one of its ambulances and a crew of four to Philadelphia, yesterday morning, when a summons was received to relieve Burholme First Aid Corps.

Yesterday afternoon at 4:30, another crew of four first-aid workers from Croydon squad left for Philadelphia, to relieve the unit's first crew. The members were kept busy throughout the day taking injured and burned firemen to hospitals and first-aid stations; and also in bathing smoke-filled eyes of the fire-fighters.

Officers of The P. T. A. Are Installed at Edgely

EDGELY, May 17—The East Bristol Township Parent-Teacher Association met Thursday evening in the school house. The new officers were installed by Mrs. Young, Morrisville, vice president of Bucks County Council, P. T. A. The new president, Mrs. Robert Reed then took over her duties. Mr. Miller presented the past president, Mrs. George Wheeler, with a gold past president's pin, after which Miss Schorsch, Langhorne, and her string band played several musical numbers. Final plans for the Penn Valley picnic were made for June.

Anyone having a car available for that day is requested to help transport the children. Refreshments of ice cream and pretzels were enjoyed.

Automobile Crashes Into Service Station Pump

An automobile reportedly driven by Thomas Gaffney, Davisville, crashed into one of the gasoline pumps at the service station of Elwood Britton, Bristol Pike, Edgely, this morning, at 4:10. The concrete roadway near the Britton service station is being repaired and a barricade has been placed to prevent traffic from going over the newly placed concrete.

It is believed that Gaffney was trying to avoid striking the barricade and in some manner crashed into the gasoline pump. The front of the automobile was damaged but the car was driven away under its own power. None of the occupants were injured. The pump was considerably damaged.

FORM AN AUXILIARY

NEWPORTVILLE, May 17—A Women's Auxiliary of Newportville Fire Company was formed on Thursday evening with 16 members. The officers elected are: President, Mrs. Charles Goodred; secretary, Mrs. Thomas Muth; treasurer, Mrs. Miller. Members plan to hold meetings in the fire station the third Thursday of each month.

ARMY MANEUVERS

Announcement has been made that during the coming summer months practice maneuvers by the Army in training in American camps will be of such an extended nature that anything that has gone before will seem like boys' play.

One purpose, of course, is to give the troops experience in the closely knit team play which is a remarkable feature of the operation of the German army in the field. The other is to provide a basis for judging the qualifications of leadership by officers in key positions.

The plan, it is reported, is to re-classify all officers so as to fit them into the jobs for which they are best suited. Behind this is the aim to put into all places of command, from platoons to Army corps, young, aggressive, quick-thinking leaders.

This has never before been done in peacetime, and it is one of the most progressive steps ever taken by the Army. In the past, politics has played a big role in the selection and rank of officers, but a determined effort will now be made to man the new Army with officers rated on efficiency and capability.

Last year's maneuvers brought forth from some observers sharp criticism concerning the apparent lack of knowledge in rather high places of what they were all about. One object of this year's war games will be to learn how deeply the lessons of last year have sunk in.

TEXAS GETS TOUGH

As soon as the venerable Madisonville, Texas, Sidewalk Cattle-men's Association achieves its first objective—to put drugstore cowboys in their place in Texas—it ought to enlarge the scope of the campaign and make it continent-wide. In reporting to the Texas Digest the steps which have been taken, the correspondent points out that they were drastic, perhaps even totalitarian, but he seemed to approve them, nevertheless.

The Association, alarmed by "the influx of drugstore cowboys," has set up the following rules: 1. Before a man is entitled to wear boots, he must own at least two head of cattle. 2. If he owns three head, he may stuff his right pants leg into his boot (right). 3. If he owns four head, he may stuff both pants legs in. 4. If he owns six head, he may wear spurs.

There is nothing totalitarian about this. The rules are the Association's. They apply to members and the only force they have for non-members springs from implied orders to ridicule pseudo cowboys. They ought to be ashamed. The American cowland has a fine tradition. He is not a thing of the past, as many seem to believe, but a part of American life today.

When Texas, under the guidance of its own drugstore cowboys, could serve the nation greatly by turning its attention to those who are cluttering up the air waves. Let the slogan be: "Cowboy Songs by Cowboys Only." It wouldn't take much campaigning to laugh the crooning drugstore cowboys off the air.

The Nazis' latest complaint against the British is a classic. They say the Iraqi are losing to the British because the British didn't provide them with enough ammunition to start a first class revolt.

Tabor Home is supported by its many friends, and is a State-aided, non-sectarian institution caring for children who, through no fault of their own, are committed from Orphans Courts of Philadelphia and adjacent counties.

At the meeting of the Perkaskie Lions Club in Perkaskie on Tuesday evening, it was revealed that the club has on order and is awaiting delivery of an obstetrical delivery table, which it will present to Grand View Hospital for use in the new Maternity Building. The financing, which runs into several hundred dollars, is being done entirely by the welfare fund of the club, which is maintained for just such purposes and has performed many notable things in the several years of the club's existence.

The MacEachern table is the most modern thing in hospital equipment and has all the features which science and surgeons have developed. It will replace the former table which has been in use since the beginning of the hospital, and which will be held in reserve for use when more than one table is needed, which has occurred since the added number of maternity patients at Grand View, with the opening of the new Maternity Building.

Miss Hoffecker, superintendent of Grand View, praised the club for its donation, saying: "It was one of the things which we have badly needed for some time, but which we were never in a position to purchase. It will be a valuable addition to the equipment of the maternity department."

The table was ordered in February, but delivery has been delayed because the manufacturing company has been rushed with orders for surgical equipment for the Army and Navy. However, the table is promised very shortly, and may arrive any day.

Seven heirs, each of whom will receive one-seventh of the $10,000 personal and $6,000 real estate holdings of Chester A. Fretz, Sellersville, include the following: Charles Godshall, Mrs. Gertrude Godshall, Alverda Fretz, Morris D. Fretz, R. Lloyd Fretz, Ralph Hartman and Mrs. Lillian Hartman.

With the exception of bequests of $100 to Grace N. Rosenberger, $100 in trust to St. John's Cemetery in Milford township and $100 in trust of St. Paul's Lutheran Cemetery at Sassa-mansville, the widow, Ellen L. Boyer will share the $700 personal and $2500 real estate holdings of Donald K. Boyer, Milford township.

The $200 personal estate of Marion E. Holah, this place, will be shared by a sister and a niece. The sum of $200 was bequeathed to a niece, Mrs. Vivian D. Atkinson, with the stipulation that she take care of family graves with the interest from the investment. A sister-in-law was bequeathed 37 shares of Pennsylvania Railroad stock and also some furniture, belonging to the testatrix. Two-thirds of the estate will be shared by a sister, Mrs. Anne T. Davis, and one-third to Benjamin P. Dresser, of Syracuse. Eva H. Pember, 7050 Mount Airy street, Philadelphia, was named executrix.

Mrs. Mary Jane Wolf, Lower State Road, who left a personal estate of $200 and real estate valued at $2500, bequeathed a property on Lower State Road to a daughter, Pauline W. Lip-pincott, 56 East Oakland avenue, town, and directed that another property at 631 South 63rd street, Phila., if still in the possession of the testatrix, should be given to another daughter, Marie W. Atkinson. If the property is no longer owned by the mother, the daughter will inherit the residue of the estate.

With the exception of a bequest of $25,000 to a daughter, Anna Elizabeth Lawrence, the widow, May B. Archer, will inherit the $45,000 personal and $5500 real estate holdings of James V. Archer, Bristol. The mother and daughter were named the executors.

The widow, Frances R. Wellens, "Brookside Farms," Newtown, was bequeathed the $500 personal estate of Adrien F. Wellens, Newtown township.

The widow was also named the executrix.

In the estate of Margaret C. Blaker, Yardley, a sister, Harriet L. Hoffman, 832 Center street, Trenton, N. J., was granted the letters of administration amounting to a personal estate of $10 and real estate holdings, including a lot and house in Yardley.

"THE GORGON'S MASK"

by Van Wyck Mason

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

Confound it! North was actually flushing at Nadia's flattery. In a vain effort to collect, to study himself, he gazed across the snowy expanse of tablecloth at Von Rentner—huge, faultlessly dressed, and thunder-browed. The Prussian must be seriously smitten with Nadia; he was positively glaring over a bowl of flaming hibiscus set before him.

To the German's right was Bruce Kilgour, talking pleasant nonsense with Phédre Renoire, and apparently amusing her.

Though his brain urged the fact upon him, North found it nearly impossible to believe that a majority of this gay and brilliant company were contemplating treachery, violence; even murder hovered in the flower-scented air and then—WAR!

"You arrived early, no?" Nadia's expression reflected only polite curiosity.

"No," North hardly knew why he chose to lie—of course she knew better.

She ignored the falsehood and, idly picking at her filet of fish, smiled a little sadly.

"Congratulations, mon Capitaine. You have found the right line of attack."

"I wonder."

"Yes," she murmured, "your seeking out our host was a masterpiece of reasoning, of intelligence. But do you imagine you have made any real progress?"

"Progress?"

"That was the word I used." Almost impulsively her shapely hand sought his below the table. "Ah, you think you are brave, my gallant Captain. But your cleverness will avail you not at all. Why must you fly in the faces of the Fates?"

He was too rapt in the candle-lit perfection of her features to reply.

"You talked to our host—you think the affair is settled your way, no?"

"Affair?" North sought a feeble refuge in a monosyllable, so great was the turmoil in his brain.

"You think you understand everything, no?" Her hand tightened over his and pressed a tiny square of paper into his palm while her voice sank to a faint, desperately earnest whisper. "My phone. Please leave immediately after dinner."

"And when is the Japanese squadron due, Mr. Kanamura?"

Vaguely, North heard the Lloyd girl putting the question in a transparent effort to be polite. The frozen-faced Japanese was trying to pretend it was a matter of routine importance!

Wearied by nearly forty-eight hours of sleeplessness, North was stirred faintly by smelling smoke as of wood burning. But reluctantly, his fatigued perceptions relapsed into their quiescent state.

The conversation veered to a discussion of the forthcoming Kam-chameha Day. Suddenly a shrill, throbbing scream came echoing down those broad stone stairs which North had ascended on his arrival.

As though jerked by invisible wires, every head turned towards the hallway, and North suffered a second shock. A gorgeous red and yellow batik across the hall was barred by shifting strata of smoke.

The sting of the wood smoke assailed his nostrils again. . . . That meant danger for the absolutely essential documents in the wall safe.

His stomach felt like a vacuum. What if he were to lose his hard-won victory?

Fiercely questioning, North turned to face Nadia and found her face a lovely, inscribed piece of marble. She returned his glance calmly, almost sympathetically.

Not so Abern Polk. Glaring furiously, he stood undecided at the head of the table. "What the devil is this?" he growled, then his large frame seemed to contract. He looked dangerous as he called, "Come upstairs, Nevins!"

A puff of wind blowing through the high-ceilinged dining room brought with it the unmistakable acrid reek of burning wood.

"What's that?" cried Polk abruptly.

"It is wood smoke, I think—Kanamura had time to suggest no more before the great white house awoke to uproar. The dinner party broke up in wild confusion.

"Quick, quick, save the paintings!" cried someone. "Save the antiques!" yelled another. "No, no, the feather cloaks—they're irreplaceable!"

Wild-eyed servants, screaming that the whole second floor was in flames, appeared in a body and rushed for safety outside.

Kilgour got up quietly, waiting for a signal from North. The latter, brushing by, muttered hurriedly: "Get to the terrace—back of house—arrest anybody acting suspiciously—watch for strangers—or Karen."

Polk was out of sight, and North darted across the smoke-filled hall, joining other guests now bounding up the wide stone steps after their host. Loud sounded the dry crackling of flames and smoke made it hard to see. All the men, save Kilgour, were struggling on up. Von Rentner and Dunant were just ahead. . . . By the time he reached the head of the stair, shafts of flame were visible at both ends of the corridor!

While North hesitated, a loud report sounded nearby and something seemed to rap him sharply on the shoulder. His first instinct was to fire at that ghostly figure in a half-open doorway, but reason warned that his first consideration must be the contents of Polk's safe.

Doggedly he lurched on towards the steel king's bedroom. Suddenly his foot struck a heavy yielding object and he fell to his knees and strained his eyes to recognize Charlton—Polk's valet. He was lying in a pool of blood; from between his shoulder blades projected the brass handle of a dagger!

"Schnell! Schnell!" he heard Von Rentner gasping somewhere in the murk ahead. Just then the electric bulbs went out with appalling suddenness.

Towards the door to Polk's room North was feeling his way when he heard two shots and someone gave an ear-shattering scream that ceased as abruptly as it had begun.

His head spinning furiously, he pressed further into the bedroom and so became aware of a figure which swayed in furious combat with another. He ignored them; his only concern was that wall safe.

Was it open?

Clawing his way along the wall, North finally reached the picture. But the safe had been opened, for the picture was swung forward, evidently on a hinge.

Shaken with a terrible fear, he thrust his hand into the safe's circular opening; he found it empty.

Who had got those precious documents? He spun heavily about, aware of scorching heat caused by hungry flames now licking through the wooden partitions of a door to the right.

What had become of the combatants? He would have given much to know who that was who lay sprawled in the center of the bedroom floor. But there was not an instant to lose if he hoped to escape with his life.

Only by a miracle of will power did North retain his senses long enough to find a way through the inferno to reach the stairs. With his clothes half-smoldering, he reeled across the terrace and was horror-stricken to see a man behind a rose-bush level a pistol at him.

Desperately North tried to shout out, "Kilgour! Don't!"

At the last instant Kilgour recognized him; instead of shooting, he came bounding forward.

"Heaven, but you're a sight!" he pointed to North's blood-soaked left shoulder. "Who shot you?"

"Dunno—only a guess—who—that—terrace" were the first words North uttered, and his swollen bloodshot eyes turned to a crumpled figure, on the center of the terrace, red-tinted by the flames.

"Some Johnny I saw legging it out of the window with a coal-oil tin in his hand. Winged the blighter when he wouldn't stop," explained Kilgour.

With increasing fury burned the mansion which the millions of Abern Polk had reared.

"Here, where are you going?" "Look, must look—that man,"

With tears from his tortured eyes streaming down singed features, North shielded his head against the withering heat and struggled to the broken figure which lay sprawled on the flags. He had just time to realize that the dead man was a Japanese Eurasian of unusual size, when a deafening crash.

"Come on, come on!" yelled Kilgour. "That bloody wall's tottering!—go! go! go!"

But North, despite the furious heat, knelt to test the dead man's various pockets, and even to thrust a finger into the instep of each shoe.

Kilgour's hand, closing on North's collar, dragged him bodily back across the terrace and down a flight of steps not a quarter of a minute before the seaward wall of Kalua crashed into smoking stone and furiously blazing wood.

"Get to be very careful now," North rasped while his painfully swollen eyes swept the lawn. "Don't want some other hombre taking pot shots at me."

"Glad it's no worse—the blighter barely grazed you," Kilgour remarked while folding a handkerchief over the skin wound on North's left shoulder, as the American told his colleague about his interview with Polk.

Bruce Kilgour pressed closer. "Then you got the proof?"

"No, somebody—I hope it was Polk—beat me to it," said he, profound discouragement in his voice. "But anyway, let's look alive, Bruce, and see what's going on; then we'll go to town and take stock."

By the glare of the conflagration, the two circled far back into the shelter of a grove of banyans. From this vantage point they recognized in the fast-gathering crowd the bulky figure of Von Rentner, the plump contours of Armand Dunant, and the feline slenderness of the Japanese ship chandler.

Of Nadia Stefan, the Lloyd girl, and Abern Polk, nothing could be seen, but presently Phédre Renoire came to North to cry out in French that she had seen the Lloyd girl, screaming at a window where the flames had trapped her.

"But where's Polk?" North wanted to know. "I must find him. When did you see him last?"

"Ah, Seigneur Dieu! It was at the head of the stairs," she cried. "Oh, mon pauvre ami, but he cannot be dead—he must not be dead!"

Sensing the Frenchwoman to be badly shaken, North gasped, "Be a good lad, Bruce—see if you can find Polk. . . . I'm all in; so is Miss Renoire—got to sit down a bit."

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

When the Englishman had disappeared among the banyan trunks, North faced Phédre.

"I must talk to you," he said with reassuring calmness. "Let us go this way." North led the darkly silent girl through the garden and onto a wide stone terrace overlooking the ocean.

When both were seated on a coping, North began: "Mademoiselle, I am about to ask you a very simple question: Will you help me?"

For a long moment the Frenchwoman made no reply; then, "That depends."

"You know what depends . . . many thousands, perhaps millions of human lives."

La Renoire's face continued to look hard and blank. Desperately North pressed on: "I'm very serious. A terrible thing has happened. Honolulu may soon become another Sarajevo."

"What makes you think so?" "That," he pointed to the volcano of reddened smoke. "Your presence, and the presence of certain other people. You see," he continued, in a matter-of-fact voice, "I know who you really are."

"And who am I?" "You are Phédre Renoire La Tour of the French Intelligence."

"How do you know that?" "Because," he replied steadily, "I knew your husband, even before you did. During the World War we worked together, though afterwards—"

She nodded promptly. "Mais oui, but he forgave you for that affair in Cuba. He always said you were the cleverest intelligence officer on your side of the Atlantic."

"Then you knew me?"

A tired smile flitted over the girl's carefully made-up features. "You knew I did."

Far below the rush of the waves over the ragged coral formations made a mournful noise.

"Now," North pursued, "I must have help. I believe you and your government are friendly?"

"Why should I help you?"

"For fairly obvious reasons. In a war between the United States and Japan, Russia could reestablish her lost supremacy in Manchuria, she could sell vast quantities of raw materials to Japan. Whether victorious or not, Japan bled white, and so fall an easy prey to the Soviets. I am very sure that the Quai d'Orsay does not want to see Red Russia become any greater."

"You argue well, I may say that we are friendly to America."

Phédre Renoire was nervously clasping and unclasping her hands in her lap. "Tell me what you have guessed."

North pulled out a cigarette case, tendered one to his companion, and opened up.

"Abern Polk, Von Rentner, and your illustrious compatriot, Dunant, some time ago organized a company known as the Transpacific. Am I right?"

"That is true."

"They plotted to bring on a war between Japan and the United States. Right?"

This time she shook her head, and North hastened to amplify:

"I should say rather that Von Rentner and Dunant plotted war, Abern Polk, however, was led to believe that only a war scare would be created."

"Why do you think that?"

Inauguration of Officers Is Conducted By Sorosis

LANGHORNE, May 17—Inauguration marked the final meeting for the season of Langhorne Sorosis, Thursday afternoon, as members saw Mrs. Frank Whittam installed as president, succeeding Mrs. James B. Rudhart.

Mrs. Maury Jones and Mrs. Thomas Jones, were installed as 1st and 2nd vice presidents, respectively; Mrs. Merle Knapp, recording secretary; Mrs. Lester Ransom, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William Reeder, treasurer; Mrs. James Rudhart, Mrs. Carl Corts, Mrs. Harry Stewart and Miss Anna Lukens, directors. The session was held in the library, with new officers making appropriate remarks.

Mrs. Lester Ransom, program chairman, was in charge of installation. To the retiring and new presidents corsages were presented.

The program of the day was in line with that being carried out this year at national and state conventions, the honoring of pioneer women. Following the singing of "Long, Long Ago," the early history of the Sorosis was given by Mrs. Harry Rothermel, who told that the club was organized by the late Mrs. Escherich.

Mrs. Harry Spencer, an honorary member, was honored as the pioneer woman of the club. She was given an old-fashioned bouquet in the club colors of blue and white. Mrs. Spencer was present at the meeting years ago when the club colors were selected. Named as the outstanding club woman locally was Mrs. George Cliff. She was also given a colonial bouquet.

The new president named chairmen of various committees to serve during the year. Refreshments concluded a delightful afternoon.

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)

Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

Almighty God, Whose blessed Son Jesus Christ went about doing good, opening the eyes of the blind, loosing the tongue of the dumb, and unstopping the ears of the deaf; we bring to Thee all those who are likewise afflicted. Let Thy voice be heard in the hearts of those who cannot hear; let the beauty of the presence of Christ be visible to the souls of those who are blind to the things of the world; let Thy truth be spoken through the lives of those from whose lips there comes no word; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

SPECIALIZATION INSTINCT IN PRESENT DAY CROP OF ATHLETES TENDS TO DAMPEN VERSATILE DAYS OF PAST WHEN ATHLETES WERE "SUPERMEN"

Times and Records of Present Day Support the Performers of Hour, But Better Conditions Have Led To A Misleading Assumption by Some Fans

(By JACK GILL)

A gray-haired old man had the floor. His brow was wrinkled with the lines of deep-cut experience. He chewed slowly and evenly on a wad of chewing tobacco. The square jaw, sharp blue eyes and crisp tone of his voice typified all of the characteristics of a once great athlete.

He was addressing a youngster who had a ball glove wrapped around the handle-bar of a blue bicycle. The spot was the corner hang-out so customary of all with those of our era. Our Thorpes, Mathewsons, Cobbs and Collins of yesterday were all better than those cavorting their stuff on the fields of sport during these trying hours.

The kid, trying hard to convince, but turning his eyes downward because he was afraid to take the glances of facts, rebutted faithfully.

"Something must have been wrong back in those days," he replied. "Perhaps you had only one outstanding athlete instead of a group of fair to middling athletes. If Cobb could hunt and end up by standing on second, what kind of stuff was the third baseman made of?"

But the cry is always the same. "He'd do the same on the best third baseman of the present hour."

It could go on for days. The local gang of sports fans who hang out on downtown street corners naturally offer argument to the tottering old gent. Yet the fact remains that baseball is slipping. Players in the backyard lots simply do not compare with the middle-aged boys of yesterday.

Summed up, the outstanding point is this: Our sport set-up today is one of strict specialization. We have sacrificed the "fun" in most of our games for the sake of professional pride. As the nation progressed, fans became more demanding in their rigid requirements. Paying for sporting entertainment, these same fans wanted the best possible in their favorite pastime.

Which is all good and well for the cash customer. But as a race of people, the sport horizon sank. And until recently it remained in hideout.

Not long ago national leaders of the race as a whole was softening up. The bleachers thought too much of admiring their stars and forgot to play themselves. Conspicuous was half the answer. A national physical fitness program was another.

Back to the original subject. The day of sport specialization is here to stay.

Time and Achievements Are Misleading Deeds

Track times are nearing sensational figures. The younger generation cannot see why the old guys who recall, recall and recall can't read the records. The hand-writing on the wall should support the era of better times and men.

Cunningham's Dartmouth mile is around four seconds off the treasured time of four minutes flat. Southern sprint stars are turning in 9.3 hundreds. These were thought to be near impossible phenomena away back when a buck bought a hunk of beef-steak big enough to sink a light cruiser and radio quiz contests were unheard of affairs.

Each day sees the realization come a bit closer. Is this, then, directly traceable to strict "stick to it" sports specialization?

Only to a slight degree. The remainder is the improved technique of training men and the progress made in athletic engineering. All boys, providing they adhere to the tips of those in charge, should be better taught in the fundamental rudiments.

The better playing area is a major factor. Cunningham's neat mile nifty, for instance, was a pre-arranged affair traversed on one of the greatest tracks built by man in any country. It is of special material, has the agile spring of a deer and is built for speed to burn. The same is true of the present cinder lay-outs. Bed upon bed of special material makes them far better than those of 20 years ago.

The popularly accepted theoretical assumption favors the point that a 10-second effort then might be a 9.8 today. It is only natural for training methods to improve over a period of years. The mistakes of predecessors are capitalized upon.

Much Depends Upon What Is Within The Boy

Back to the old vet on the corner. Still sifting his tobacco and still chatting with the kid on the bike, he was now warmed to a pitch that recalled his days of a "barbering" never-silent third-baseman.

"Much of the trouble with the boys of nowadays is deep down in the boys themselves," quoth he. "They mature too rapidly and forget sports. They are men in mind but still ball players in body. To be a good player in any game you must be a ball player in mind, body, and most of all, in heart. The chest, stomach and head mean a lot."

"This consarned business of a very good high school athlete throwing in the sponge after graduation doesn't have it. That is what is ruining our sports set-up. And I, for one, am willing to shoulder part of the blame. It's us older fans who do too little for the youngsters coming up. The cancellation of 'Boys' Week,' a kids' program that the youth in the community looked forward to each year with wild-eyed enthusiasm, and other 'lack interest' incipations on our part, have lent a degrading hand to the cause."

So there you have the story.

SPEED DEMONS BACK AT LANGHORNE FOR GRUELLING RACES

Fastest Mile Speedway Drivers Ready To Again Risk Their Necks

ADDED PRIZE OF $100

Teter Ready To Make Award If Track Record Is Broken

The fastest mile speedway drivers ever to risk their necks at the wheel of a high-powered racer are back at Lucky Teter's Langhorne Speedway after a week of grueling tests on the famous Indianapolis Speedway.

This championship contenders will compete in the second program of Lucky Teter's plan to run big league automobile races every Sunday at Langhorne.

Tony Willman, of Milwaukee, Wis., came back from Indianapolis with headlines who thrilled the record crowd of 43,846 fans last Sunday at Langhorne. The drivers flew by airplane to be here in time for tomorrow's speed clinic.

Willman, Ted Horn, Bob Sall, Joe Chitwood, Everett Saylor headed the contingent of drivers who hope to establish a new world's mile speedway record on the fast oval. When Sall came within .12 of a second of beating Willman's record of 103.4 miles per hour last Sunday, Teter posted an added prize of $100 and a $1,000 gold cup for the driver who sets a new record Sunday. Sall attained a peak of 108 miles per hour on his qualifying lap, but a dangerous slide on the curve coming into the home stretch cut his average for the mile below the record. Sall insists he would have set a record had it not been for the spin.

With the greatest drivers signed and Lucky Teter promising to risk his own neck in a sensational automobile "rollover," fans were assured of thrills surpassing even the excitement of last Sunday's opener. Teter said he would remain in the car as it rolled end-over-end and side-over-side.

A well-known Perkashie matron, Gertrude S. Seidel, has named her husband, Ralph M. Seidel, the respondent in a libel in divorce charging him with desertion February 28, 1936.

The libellant and respondent, who is employed by the Penna. State Highway Department, here, and resides in town, were married August 27, 1924, in Philadelphia. The alleged desertion took place in Perkashie 12 years after they were married.

Charging her husband, Patrick A. Dunlavy, with desertion, Agnes Mary Dunlavy has begun an action in divorce against him, according to a libel in divorce in the office of Prothonotary Ezra Miller here. They were married by the Rev. Father Campbell, October 20, 1921, in Philadelphia in St. Joachim's Catholic Church.

The present address of the libellant is Croydon and that of the respondent is Pleasantville, N. J. The desertion is alleged to have taken place October 17, 1923.

Jackson and Carlin Rap Home Runs in Eleven-Hit Barrage

By Jack Gill

Trenton High School atoned for a defeat administered there earlier in the season by Bristol High School here yesterday by pounding out a 9 to 4 verdict over the Bunnies. The invaders found Dutch Vandegrift's slants to their likings and rammed out several extra base knocks.

Jackson and Carlin hit four base bases, while Ryan nearly circled the bases on a triple. Jackson's homer opened the second inning. Carlin rapped his in the fourth with Semasky on base.

Vince Boccardo once again led the Cardinals at bat. The steady playing Bristol left fielder has been delivering all season for the locals. Joops Mangiacini, who started at first base, celebrated his return to the starting line-up by garnering two safeties.

But Semasky, aside from a rocky third inning, held Bristol completely in check. The only trouble he encountered came from pinch hitters Davies and Ruby. The third saw Bob Barouth single, go to second on a wild pitch and come home on Boccardo's double. Boccardo later tallied on an infield knock.
